

OOH LA LA: 'BAD BOY' EMMET SCANLON SET TO MELT LADIES' HEARTS ON NEW SERIES THE ROARING TWENTIES

TV ROLE: Emmet Scanlon

"BAD BOY" actor Emmet Scanlon is set to melt hearts on The Roaring Twenties — billed as Ireland's answer to Scrubs.

The new series follows the misadventures of a group of friends as they navigate through their twenties.

And ladies hearts will melt at the sight of Emmet J Scanlon — set to play a "bad boy" French footballer in the new series.

The series, which has finished filming in Ardmore Studios in the last few weeks, is a light-hearted look at life in the capital.

Lined up to bring these characters to life are Diarmuid Murtagh (Kevin) who got his start on the Irish language soap, Ros na Run; Amy Kirwin (Mary) who has lit up the big screen in Plastic Wolves; and Jason Healy (Ray) who appeared in The Tudors alongside Jonathan Rhys Meyers.

And joining this cast of fresh faces is Emmet J Scanlon, a new regular on the scene who is making the most of his time in the spotlight with roles in a number of releases next year.

And the actor who revealed to the Evening Herald previously that he appears to be carving out a name for himself as the new bad boy on the block is not set to put this character trait aside for his role in the series.

He said: "My role is as a French footballer who shows up to open a shop in the area. And he's a typical football star, very arrogant, charming, a bit of an a**hole really."

"So he's no change to the bad boy image."
